The New Standards—led by Chan Poling (The Suburbs) on piano, bassist John Munson (Semisonic), and Steve Roehm on vibraphone—formed in 2005 to play their favorite songs in a stripped-down, acoustic setting. Just as mid-century American jazz musicians reimagined “old standards,” The New Standards create jazz arrangements of recognizable hits and deep tracks alike, drawn from diverse musical genres. Their repertoire spans several decades and includes songs from Dan Hicks to David Byrne, Bowie to Beck, making room for solos and arrangements with the freedom of jazz, and yet never fully abandoning the modest soul of pop and rock.
